The draft of the G.O. No 247 of 5.12.95 dated the 22nd June 1895, was obtained from the General Records there are no other papers connected with the subject, available in the Office

An enquiry was made in the Council Branch for any papers of 1895 on the subject No papers are forthcoming

The Inspector General's letter is submitted for orders

22/10/02 Under Secy

Attention is invited to the following remarks made by Mr Gibbons in Budget Office under date and :—

(1) "The heading of the last column often not fully understood & and are not always the result of calculations"

(2) "Orders are often called for in unreasonable language"

(3). "Orders issued are frequently not the result of the Govt orders but are issued on the authority of the Heads of Offices"

Mr Gibbons has been asked to submit his remarks

Mr Jukes

I think the charges are such that Mr. Bhabha should be called upon to withdraw and apologise for ~~the~~ He seems to be labouring under the curious impression that he will have all the powers of Govt if he is made the Secretary

The arrangement which was tried for some time was done away with as being unsatisfactory The disadvantages of having the head of a department as Secretary need not be stated in detail If this request & other similar ones are granted there will be no need for any Secretary in any department

The Inspector-General who making the proposal might at any rate have been more modest in his estimate of the work done by others and appreciation of what might

SIR,

I have the honour to request that Government may be pleased to appoint me ex-officio Secretary in the Education Department In April 1890 I was appointed Education Secretary The Education Secretary enjoyed the same powers and performed the same duties as the Inspector General of Education does now and had in addition the duties of Secretary During the period of regency the designation of Education Secretary was altered from June 1895 to Inspector General of Education for reasons I need no mention here During the time I was Secretary the work of the Department went on smoothly and rapid progress was made along all lines while economy was vigilantly exercised

2 The advantages of combining the offices of Secretary and Inspector General are briefly as follow -

(1) The proposals of the Inspector General are often not fully understood and lead to unnecessarily long correspondence an

and delays, and even then are not always disposed of satisfactorily

(2) Orders are not seldom passed in unsuitable language which would not be the case if I were Secretary.

(3) Orders have not seldom been passed in the last few years over the head of the Inspector General without consulting him In such cases waste of expenditure has occurred while the Inspector General's sense of responsibility has been weakened and he has been placed in a humiliating position.

(4) If the correspondence of the Principal of the Central College passed through the hands of the Inspector General in his capacity as Secretary Government would have the benefit of the expert opinion of the latter of which they are now deprived

3 I would add that the Heads of the Public Works Geological Military and Forest Departments in Mysore are ex-officio Secretaries to Government In British India the Director of Public Instruction of Panjab is ex-officio Secretary to Government, and in some Native States the offices of Director and Secretary are combined in the same person.

4 Under these circumstances, I submit that Government may be pleased to sanction my request which is made in the interest of the Educat on Department

I have the honour to be

Sir

Your most obedient servant,

H J Bhabha

Inspector General.
